Indigenous players slow & steady in Covid vaccine race

Vaccine candidates from Hester Biosciences. Premas Biotech, Neuberg Supratech making progress

SOHINI DAS & VINAY UMARJI

MumbaiAhmedahad, 5 October

hile leading vaccine candidates are in advanced stages of clinical trials, a handful of indigenous players, too, is progressing slowly, albeit steadily.

Not only do these players feel there will be room for multiple Covid-19 vaccines in the market, but they may also play a crucial role in scaling up national production of the successful candidate.

The country's largest veterinary vaccine maker Hester Biosciences, for example, is foraying into the animal vaccine space with its Covid-19 vaccine candidate. It is developing the vaccine in collaboration with the Indian Institute of Technology (IIT)-Guwahati.

The vaccine will be based on an avian virusbased vector platform (avian paramyxovirus). Rajiv D Gandhi, managing director (MD) and chief executive officer (CEO), Hester Biosciences, said the firm had taken up space for a laboratory at IIT-Guwahati.

The animal or pre-clinical trials are yet to begin, but Gandhi said it was important to get things right. "There will be room for multiple vaccines in the market. It's important to do the job correctly," he said.

Similarly, a team of researchers, led by IIT-Bombay alumnus Prabuddha Kundu, is developing a triple antigen vaccine at Premas Biotech. It has successfully identified three major antigens as a recombinant novel coronavirus vaccine candidate.

According to Kundu, unlike single-protein vaccines currently under trial across the world, Premas Biotech has adopted a three-pronged approach to develop multi subunit vaccine. The triple-antigen Covid-19 vaccine candidate. PRAK-03202, has produced neutralising immune response in animal studies. Premas Biotech is now in talks with regulatory authorities for the next phase.

Its animal study of the SARS-CoV-2 vaccine candidate comprised 50 mice, divided into 10 cohorts dosed with 5, 10, and 20 micrograms of PRAK-03202. The vaccine candidate was generally well tolerated and safe at all doses, with

The company, which has its specialisation in protein therapeutics, is willing to go slow with the trials since it wants to ensure efficacy of the vaccine candidate.

"We are in talks with regulatory authorities to discuss Phase-1 trials. We have put up the case to them on how our vaccine can be scaled up quickly since large-scale manufacturing of yeast is easily possible. In the next couple of months, we should be conducting Phase-1. We wanted to make sure we do it well first time rather than hurry," said Kundu.

Premas claimed its production cycle of one week is the fastest among the world for anticipated vaccine. The company said it can make 20-30 million doses in a week since the system based of yeast is highly scalable.

On the other hand, Gujarat government arm Gujarat Biotechnology Research Centre (GBRC) has signed an agreement with Neuberg Supratech Reference Laboratory, Ahmedabad, a unit of Neuberg Diagnostics, a start-up in the

According to the agreement, they would develop Covid-19 recombinant vaccine and diagnostics. As part of the agreement, Neuberg Supratech has been looking for immune markers for Covid-19 positive patients by using several of its in-house high throughput sequencing machines. The firm declined to respond.

These smaller players are likely to play a key role when it comes to scaling up manufacturing of the successful candidate. Gandhi said his Nepal plant is operating at 25 per cent capacity, and the company can easily use it to contract manufacture any candidate that emerges successful first. "We can also enhance the capacity easily without much investment. We will definitely chip in to scale up India's manufacturing of the Covid-19 vaccine," said Gandhi.

The large players have already indicated that they are repurposing their existing capacities to make way for the Covid-19 vaccine.

Some like Serum Institute are using capacities for Covid-19 vaccines, while others like Indian Immunologicals plan to use multi-product facilities to make additional volumes.

Biocon's skin drug sales surge despite limited Covid-19 study

Firm hopes the sales of itolizumab will pick up as it enters Ph-4 trials

SOHINI DAS & SAMREEN AHMAD Mumbai/Bengaluru, 5 October

Biocon's repurposed psoriasis drugitolizumab has seen sevenfold jump in sales after it got an emergency use authorisation for Covid-19 treatment. The drug, however, is yet to be a part of the clinical management protocol of the health ministry for treatment of Covid-19, which implies that the government has not yet recommended it as an effective treatment.

With Phase-4 clinical trials on, sales may see a further uptick if the data supports it helps Covid-19 patients, said experts. The data from market research firm AIOCD AWACS showed that volumes shot up seven times in August (350 units) from just 50 units in July when it received the approval. In June, the drug did not show sales.

In India, itolizumab, known by the brand name Alzumab, has been priced at ₹8,000 per vial. Most patients require four vials for Covid-19 treatment, taking the cost of the therapy to

Bharat Biotech to use adjuvant for Covaxin

Bharat Biotech will use adjuvant from Kansas-based ViroVax for its Covaxin. Adjuvants are pharmacological or immunological agents that improve the immune response of a vaccine. It may be added to a vaccine to produce more antibodies and longer lasting immunity, thus minimising the dose of antigen needed. Bharat Biotech is conducting Phase-2 clinical trials in healthy volunteers for Covaxin. SOHINI DAS ₹32,000. In a few cases, a patient might need two more vials.

To repurpose the drug for Covid-19, the previous trial was done on a cohort of 30 patients suffering from moderate to severe acute respiratory disorder syndrome due to Covid-19 Of them, 20 received itolizumab and 10 received standard care. The 20 who were administered itolizumab of the 10 patients under standard care died. After many experts pointed out that the study was conducted on limited number of patients, Biocon has started a Phase-4 post marketing surveillance of the drug on a pool of 300 patients that will take a couple of months to complete. A Phase-4 study is a follow-up on real world evidence on the efficacy and safety of a drug.

When we did a proof of concept study, we got the emergency use authorisation because it is already an approved drug and has a lot of safety data," said Kiran Mazumdar-Shaw, executive chairperson, Biocon.

Satyanarayana Mysore, head of department of interventional pulmonology, Manipal Hospitals, who used the drug on Covid-19 patients said the use of the drug would rise if more supporting data emerges. Mysore used the drug on two patients when Roche's tocilizumab was not available. "Both responded well. But two is a small number." Mysore said.

Shaw had earlier said Biocon sees itolizumab as a blockbuster opportunity for the firm and has been working towards ramping up its capacity.
